"Turn A Frown Upside Down" - the theme of the Association For the Study of Childhood Cancer (ASK). This theme was held in the minds of club members who began preparations for a Skate-A-Thon to benefit this very worthwhile cause. The primary objective of the Skate-A-Thon was to raise funds for research of childhood cancer and provide emotional support to parents of children with any type of cancer being treated at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond. However, a second objective was to provide public awareness of this program based in Richmond for those in our community who have had need in the past or might have need in the future.

The combined efforts of the skaters, local businesses, citizens who sponsored the skaters, the local schools for their support, and all supportive individuals made the success of this project far surpass our greatest expectations. How did we have any idea that such a large amount would be raised for this project.

It's our wish to be able to thank every skater personally who participated and collected their pledged money, but this would be impossible to do. The tremendous success of this project is due to those of you who skated and so faithfully collected your pledges. We are so very proud to have such supportive and loyal youth in our community. Again to all of you skaters, WE SALUTE YOU for your efforts and thank each of you so very much for your cooperation. We sincerely hope you enjoyed the event and will know in your hearts that your efforts did not go unrewarded. You may be assured that the time you have given will help pave the way toward finding a cure for childhood cancer.

We want to take this opportunity to thank the many businesses who donated prizes for the winners of this event and a special "Thank You" to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones of A J. Skateworld for their generous donation of the rink and skate rental. Without the support of these businesses, this project could not have been possible.

Also, a very special thanks to the Ladies Class of Reedy Springs Baptist Church who assisted our club members with preparations of sandwiches and baked goods for the skaters' lunch, to Wilbun 's Market for the donation of cookies for breaks and lunch, to the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company for the donation of drinks during breaks and lunch, and to Charles Chips Co. for their donation of chips.

We also want to extend our thanks to the Times-Virginian and WTYX Radio Station for their excellent coverage of this event.

We were so very fortunate to have such dedication from one individual and his parents our Celebrity chairman, Tim Woodson. Tim and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sammy Woodson, worked many hours soliciting donations from local, wood producers and associated wood businesses for such a nice grand prize donation, the Honda Trail Bike. We thank the individuals and companies who so generously donated toward the Grand Prize (names listed in article on presentation of this prize). Tim and his parents help with the Skate-A-Thon was insurmountable. We must especially commend Tim for his dedication in trying to reach out and help others whose lives have been touched by cancer, as his was.

Again, our club cannot express our appreciation enough to all of the above-mentioned for their part in making this project a most successful one. If for any reason, we have overlooked anyone, please know it was not intentional. God bless each of you - Appomattox is a wonderful community! Sincerely,
Appomattox Junior Woman's Club

The Pastor Speaks

Inflation is the topic of conversation on early everyone's lips. The price of everything is going up, jumping in price every week. Producers and dealers are trying to keep up with each other in profits. Consumers are buying now hoping to beat the price rise or shortages. News media tell of possible shortages which become a reality because of public panic.

The free enterprise system of supply - and - demand breaks down because supplies are manipulated and demand is artifically created. People are told they need and want through advertising.

The anxiety that is generated by all of this economic mess causes us to begin to believe we cannot make ends meet and that we are economically deprived. The fact is that the overwhelming majority of Americans have never been so materially blessed.

When scarcity or shortages are predicted, the emotional reaction is not to conserve or manage more efficiently. The first reactions seem to get all the most you can before it is gone. That has been our reaction to the predicted gas shortage.

Jesus, in the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 5-7) speaks to our anxieties and fears about worldly possessions. We know what he says, but Oh how hard it is to accept and live by it. Jesus says don't be anxious about food and clothing. Life is more than just eating, and the body is more than clothing. How foolish we are to get all the most you can before it is gone. That has been our reaction to the predicted gas shortage.

Jesus, in the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 5-7) speaks to our anxieties and fears about worldly possessions. We know what he says, but Oh how hard it is to accept and live by it. Jesus says don't be anxious about food and clothing. Life is more than just eating, and the body is more than clothing. How foolish we are to get all the security rest in bread and our confidence in the latest fashions. They have their place, but not the sole reason for living.

Jesus would likewise tell us today not to be anxious about gas and cars. Life is more than chrome and steel. Life is more than running up and down the road in automobiles. They have their place and our life-style has made them a necessity, but they are not the sole reason for living.

So Jesus gives us some practical advice that may not mix too well with our capitalist system, or any economic system. He says to seek first the Kingdom of God. Simply translated that means to love God and neighbor as yourself. The promise that accompanies such direction in living is that all other needs will be met.

That does not necessarily mean you will get more material things. Jesus knows how we would let that distort our motives for faith and service. Rather, Jesus promise suggests we may be satisfied with less if we are more engaged in the righteous life.

One thing for sure, we will know the peace of Jesus' promise and the sense of community only as we are willing to live in that direction.

Making the Right Decisions

Lesson for June 3, 1979
Background Scripture:
I Samuel 13:1 to 16:23
Focal Passages: I Samuel 15:10-16, 22-23; 6:1

For rebellion is like the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is like iniquity and (idolatry. Because you have rejected the word of the Lord, he has likewise rejected you from being king. (I Sam. 15:23)

The Initial Choice

The people of Israel originally lived under a theocracy as opposed to a democracy. A theocracy is a government ruled by God. When the Israelites called for a king they were making a radical shift from the divine plan.

Stability was something that Israel lacked. Seeking out a king was considered by Samuel as a rejection of God. To suggest that a human king could take God's place was utterly preposterous to Samuel.

Instead of placing their confidence in God to lead them, the people of Israel had received that a king would stabilize their country. After all, the surrounding countries had monarchs! Why shouldn't the people of Israel have a leader? Such a leader might offer a "New Deal" or a "Great Society." In the end the people got their king but God made the choice!

We who live in moder times live with the same fallacy which the Israelites did, namely, we look to everything but God for all our needs and problems. But the answers we come up with don't often last or satisfy. The decision to reject or ignore God's rightful place in our life is a decision to ultimately lose.

Put to the Test

Saul's first day "on the job" was somethign of a failure! His first encounter with the Philistines in battle would have been a total flop had it not been for his son, Jonathan. It seems from the very start of Saul's career that he would have a difficult time getting his "act" together. He even tried to assume the priestly duties of Samuel and offer sacrifices before battle. For this he was which he was sternly rebuked.

Time and again Saul acted with indecision and impetuosity. Saul ultimately became hostile to David, who was quickly becoming the people's "favorite son." The end result of Saul's bitterness came later on in the heat of battle when Saul committed suicide. His life was a continual mess! Although he did achieve some significant victories during his kingship, Saul was by and large a poor speciman for a leader.

Impetuous decisions can lead a person to a bad end. Someone has remarked that we should be careful of the ruts we get in, for we will be in them a long time! The saying is true. The choices we must make regarding education, vocation, and marriage partner are difficult ones. Careful thinking and planning can help us avoid a "head-on crash" late on down life's road.

One day a man came to the forks in life's road. To go left meant going back to the same dull and meaningless job, while to turn right meant a new position with meaning and a future. Perhaps due to insecurity and poor planning he chose to go left. He was miserable for the next twenty-two years!

The Final Test

Saul's failure is perhaps best displayed in his building a monument to himself. But his problem ran even deeper than mere pride in himself, for Saul's major flaw was his unwillingness to obey the commands of God. The act of "Holy War" meant that no spoils were to be brought home. Saul disobeyed this commandment in order that he and his people might benefit from the "booty." True to fashion, Saul placed the blame on the people rather than accepting responsibility for his own actions. Even with all his insistance upon sacrifices, Saul was "dethroned" and Samuel departed from his presence to annoint Saul's successor.

God revealed to Samuel that he was a God of new beginnings!

Parasitized cereal leaf beetle larvae arrived today by plane at the Lynchburg Airport and were put on the Calvin Harris farm near Bent Creek, Hix Brothers farm at Hixburg and the John T. Hunter farm near Red House.

Much of the spring oat crop is severly infested. Two materials are recommended: Guthion 22 percent EC rate 1 and one-half-two pints per acre - wait 30 days before harvest; or malathion 57 percent EC 1 - one and one-half per acre - wait 7 days before harvest.

It's a good practice to put Diazinon 50% W.P. in the tobacco transplant water-for mechanical transplanting use 8 oz. per 200 gallons of water; for hand transplanters use 4 oz. per 200 gallons of water. Always use 200 gallons of water at transplanting regardless of which method of transplanting is used.

There has been several calls about alfalfa weevil control. There are two different insecticides recom mended. Some producers are planning to make a stubble spraying. Treat only if larvae and adults are present and new growth is being delayed. Stubble sprays are very harmful to beneficial insects population and may cause "flare-ups" of other pest species. Either malathion 57% EC 1¼ pint per acre or Sevin 50% WP 2 pounds per acre. Sevin 80% WP 1¼ pounds per acre should do an adequate job as a stubble treatment.

During the first quarter of this year, Appomattox producers tested six samples of corn silage that averaged 38.0% dry matter and 22.2% crude fiber compared with the state average of 38.4% dry matter and 22.4% crude fiber. Also there were 7 samples of hay averaging 58.9% TDN and 14.2% crude protein compared with the state average of 51.1% RDN and 12.0% crude protein.

Appomattox corn silage samples were right in line while the hay samples were of higher quality.

Cattle numbers for Appomattox County as of January 1, 1979, have been reported by the Crop Reporting Service. All cattle and calves are estimated at 17,500 compared with 16,000 in 1977 and 18,000 on January 1, 1978. This represents a 2% drop for the county compared to 4% for the state.

Here we are in hay making season and it's well to point out some reminders:

1. Youth under 16 years of age cannot be employed to operate tractors, machinery or other hazardous work unless they have received special instruction and are certified for such work.

2. No extra riders on tractors while moving.

3. Adjust mower, rake and baler with the egnine or PTO turned off.

4. Operate equipment carefully on sloping ground.

5. New tractors (after 1976) must have a roll over protective structure and seat belt if operated by employees.

6. Handle large round bales of hay very carefully.

production of food and fiber.

One of the main purposes of ASCS gearing into the program is to try solve agriculture related fuel problems locally. Our county office will help farmers resolve fuel problems, assist in preparing applications, and distribute copies of Federal and State instructions and regulations from the State Energy Office.

If there are problems that cannot be solved locally, ASCS will help get further assistance from the DOE regional office.

KINGS MARKETS

At meetings of shareholders and directors of Kings Markets, Inc., held May 19, 1979, Mr. Jamerson and Mr. Drinkard were elected to the Board of Directors of Kings Markets, Inc., replacing Mr. Fitzpatrick, who is devoting his time to the new southside operation, and Mr. S. J. Thompson, Jr., formerly attorney for Kings Markets, Inc., who is representing Mr. Fitzpatrick in the new southside venture. The newly constituted Board, composed of Mr. Jamerson, Mr. Drinkard Ralph J. King, Malcolm J. Reid of Staunton, Virginia, and Harvey L. King, Jr., elected as a new officers of Kings Markets, Inc., William E. Jamerson, Sr., President, Ralph J. King, Vice President for Operations, J. B. Drinkard, Jr., Secretary-Treasurer, and Harvey L. King, Jr., Assistant Secretary. The new officers of Kings Markets, Inc., feel that the recent transactions will give Kings a substantial injection of capital, while also localizing its operations and allowing for additional economies in management and supervisory expenses. The combination of the six southside stores being sold to Mr. Fitzpatrick should also create a geographically cohesive chain capable of providing efficient and economic service to the public in that area.

Kings Markets, Inc., recently submitted a modified plan of arrangement to its creditors which was accepted by a majority in number and amount of its creditors at a meeting held May 7, 1979. Kings management feel that the new structure of its operations and the additional capital being generated by the stock purchase by Mr. Jamerson and Mr. Drinkard and the purchas of operating stores by Mr. Fitzpatrick will insure the successful satisfaction of the liabilities of Kings Markets, Inc., to its creditors and the continued business operations of Kings Markets in the Central Virginia area. Kings will continue to operate its existing stores in Lynchburg, Amherst County, Charlottesvile, Appomattox, Brookneal, Altavista, Bedford and Forest.

E. MARSHALL COOK TO SPEAK ON NEW DRUG ABUSE LAWS

about drug abuse and to express their views regarding methods of controlling illicit drug use. The committee is appreciative of cooperation received from citizens and agencies. The Committee feels some progress has been made toward controlling illegal drug usage, recognizing, however, there still remains much to be done.

Invitations to attend the session June 6, 1979, have previously been extended to persons in the public sector. Interested citizens wishing to attend June 6, 1979, or who want further information may call Roland B. Murphy, Chairman of the Drug Education Committee, at 352-8224.

Bible School at Rocks

Bible School will began at Rocks Baptist Church June 11, 1979 and go through June 15, 1979 from 6 to 9 p.m. There will be a place for all ages. Be sure to attend this year. You will receive a blessing. Marilyn Harris is the director of the school and Ruth Gladwell is the assistant director. Lots of plans are being made. It should be very interesting to everyone young and old.
